Valley vintage done right

If you're still avoiding vintage or thrift stores because they seem a little, well ... icky, then you've got to try Hollywood Regency. It's where we got the clothes for our cover, and they're anything but icky, right? You'll find one-of-a-kind stuff to supplement your wardrobe, as well as primo choices for Halloween – (seriously, how many Michael Jacksons do we really need this year?). The people are nice, the stuff is cool and the atmosphere is welcoming. Visit at 708 W. Montecito Ave. in Phoenix (near 7th Avenue and Camelback), call 'em at 602.277.5765 or check it out at MySpace.com/HollywoodRegencyVintage.

TRADE YOUR PEN FOR AN IPOD

Record lectures with Mikey, a recorder mic you attach to an iPod. It records sounds as soft as whispers and has built-in speakers for quick playback. Recordings can be synced through iTunes for easy editing, posting on the web or sharing with others. $79.99; available at Fry's Electronics, The Apple Store and Amazon.com, or check it out at BlueMic.com.

The. Coolest. Thing. Ever.

If you didn't already reeeallly want an iPhone, here's something else it can do: Send postcards. The Shoot it! postcard messaging app lets you shoot a pic, select a recipient from your contact list and type a personal message. Your real – not virtual – postcard is then printed out, with your message on the back, and mailed the next business day from the country closest to its destination. It's just 99 cents for U.S. addresses – cheaper than buying a postcard and stamp, and way, way cooler. Plus, it supports the local economy. Shoot it!'s founders are four Phoenix businessmen. Check it out at ShootIt.com.

Glop, Glam, Pure, Straight and Blow!

azTeen readers are waaaay too young to remember '70s hair staples like Gee, Your Hair Smells Terrific. Back then, if you needed a flatiron, you used a ... well, a flat iron. Needless to say, the past few decades have been very, very good for hair. Now three companies are releasing the next generation of hair products. Glop and Glam's collection of detanglers, creams and gels made for kids – in a good way; they are organic and smell like dessert. Try the Creamsicle Detangler, the Chocolate Cream anti-frizz shine cream, the Watermelon Hard Candy Gel; check 'em out at GlopAndGlam.com. Pureology's EssentialRepair products were created for over-processed, damaged hair and includes shampoo, conditional, split-end treatment, styling protectant, leave-in conditioner and restorative hair masque. Industry giant Redken is introducing its Straight Collection, a line of products tailored specifically to fine hair or coarse hair. Check out align 12 protective straightening lotion, power tame 16 intense straightening balm and sheer straight 06 lightweight straightening gel at Redken.com. And finally, the New York Blow Dry Bar is introducing its Blow Hair Care Collection at Ulta. The line is designed to combat damage, inconsistent results and a style that doesn't last. Check it out at BlowNY.com.
